Bones and my older Brother Joe were buddies. There were quite alot of friends who hung out together, and I love each and everyone of them....We celebrated New Years Eve this one time....so long ago I forget which year...but after the celebration, we all went to my Brothers house and spent the night...When Bones woke up with tinsel around his neck, he walked outside, looked up and down the street with a weird look on his face, I remember wondering what is he doing....he came back into the house and shouted, "I don't see any difference out there from 1982 to 1983 so what is all the comotion about?" We all looked at each other and laughed and said "Yeah you are right"!!! We laughed for a long time over that and I will always remember it. But there are so many memories, football games, festivals, partys...He was so funny and he loved being amusing. Because he was so smart he looked at things so differently and we all should take a lesson from him, not to take things so seriously and live our lives the way that we want to. There are no words to say how sad I am. I really wanted to see him again in my life. He is part of my heart and will always be there. My brother Joe was stricken with grief and is very sad over this, he asked me to send his condolences to the family. THERE IS ONLY ONE BONES JONES!
